Climate Change and Flood Risk Mitigation: Built and Natural Infrastructure Go “Hand in Hand”

Climate change, combined with loss of natural infrastructure throughout southern Canada, is driving the costs of flooding upwards in most regions, thus conveying a significant burden to home owners and municipalities. The talk will focus on new flood risk Standards that are being created and deployed in Canada, complemented with efforts to retain natural infrastructure that, in combination, will help to limit an otherwise unsustainable climate-change induced burden. The practical contribution that Conservation Authorities can make to advance this effort will be emphasized.
